HEROES OF 'SEVENTY-SIX.

"In the great war of the revolution Washington had no firmer friends or firmer supporters than the Roman Catholic members of his staff, and when we look at the great haval struggle Which was the pride and glory of the American people at that time, the first hame that springs to our lips is that of an Irishman, a Roman Catholic, Captata John O'Brien, who achieved the litzt great naval victory of the war off the coast of Maine, It was not asked achether Kosensko, or Pulaski, or La-Payette, were Catholics when the thirn colonies were strugglish for their independence. At that time could you find any fanatics? At that time could yeu find persons stealthily creeping round from one end of the country to the other in secrecy instriguing against any man's religion? I know we talk about the breadth and liberality of the American people in these days. Why, sir, it is not to be compared with the breadth and liberality and wisdom that were exhibited in those times. My friends, if we should have war with England on account of the Venezuelan matter, or war with Spain on account of the Cuban matter, where would the teembers of this famous organization be? Where would they be found? They under the same auspices that they were found in the war of the rebellion, taking the steamers for Novia Scotla to pu thmeselves under the protection of Queen Victoria and the British flag."

Washington, April 9.-After being in retirement for some weeks, the tariff silver bill was brought forward in the seniute today as a text for a speech by Mr. Mantle, of Montana, one of the five Republican senators who voted against considering the tariff. Mr. Mantle defended the course of the silver Republican senators, declaring that the Dingley bill was not framed as a patriotic measure. He urged that unsectional protection should be linked with bimetallism. A sharp tariff colloquy followed be tween Senators Mills, Hoar, Hawley and Mitchell, as to the effect of the Wilson bill on wool. Some progress was made on the Indian appropriation bill, but the sectarian school question went over until to

Mr. Mantle was congratulated at the close of his speech by the silver senators from both sides of the senate chamber.

There was a lively tariff colloquy fol lowing Mantle's speech. Mr. Hawley (Rep., Va.) questioned some of the wool figures which had been given, and spoke of the idle factories and stagnant condition of the industry in the east.

HOAR STIRS MILLS UP. Mr. Hoar added that the remarks of Mr. Mantle implied that eastern manu facturers were willing to leave western wool in ithe lurch after getting protection for their own manufactures. But Mr. Hoar declared that eastern senators had voted here for protection on wool, while the western states had sent sen-ators here—from Kansas, Texas and Oregon-who haid voted for free wool. This brought Mr. Mills to his feet, who declared that against the state ments made that the wool manufacture had suffered from the Wilson tariff law, he would place the fact that there was a greater use of wool than ever, every fibre of it was manufactured by Amer loan labor, the people of the United States had cheaper woolen goods, the calved more revenue that ever from wool and wool itself had ad

AN ALL-NIGHT SCARE.

A foung Englishman's Experience with a Stuffed Beat.

Young Englishmen visiting the United States have as many absurd and amusing experiences as Americans have when in foreign countries. The Washington Star tells of an English traveler who had been assured that west of the Missouri river the entire country was infested with bears, some of which were so bold that they came into the towns.

He stopped in a Kansas village, and in the evening started out for a walk. The stores were closed, but the moon was shining brightly. He rambled about the place for a couple of hours, and started down the business street for the hotel. Suddenly he saw before him on the sidewalk a big bear, sitting on its haunches, with open mouth and paws extended.

In a moment he was on top of a porch crying for help, but no one heard him. and the bear sat and watched him. All night long he stayed there, trembling for fear bruin would elimb the post, but comforting himself with the idea that it was too small to be used by a bear.
